Notes:

- Since statehood, the legislature has been in special session a total of 465 days. Costs specific to special sessions have been tracked since 1997, and since that time, the legislature has convened in special session 24 times, for a total of 317 days.
- During special sessions called by the governor, consideration is limited to subjects the governor designates and to bills vetoed following adjournment of the last regular session. Under subjects considered, we do not include measures to suspend uniform rules or to override vetoes.
- Lawmakers extended the second regular session of the 22nd Legislature from May 14, 2002, through May 16, 2002, at which time members of both chambers voted to convene in special session on the following day, May 17, 2002. By so doing, the legislature was able to dictate the topics of consideration, rather than being limited to the governor's agenda (subsistence).
- The first special session of the 25th Legislature was held in Anchorage and marks the first time the full legislature has met outside of the Capital.
- The third special session of the 25th Legislature marks the first time a session has toured the state.
- The first special session of the 26th Legislature is the second to have been held in Anchorage.
- The legislature at impasse, the first regular session of the 27th Legislature was adjourned by the governor, who then called a special session for the following day.
- In an unprecedented move, the governor on April 25, 2012, issued a supplemental proclamation withdrawing his oil tax bills (SB 3001 and HB 3001) from consideration by the third special session of the 27th Legislature. A Legal Services opinion deemed that action to be unauthorized, but the Senate concluded that without the governor's support of the bill, there was no realistic chance of meaningful policy discussion. The Senate adjourned, leaving the only bill in play, HB 9--the instate gasoline bill--unaddressed. After lengthy caucus considerations, the House also adjourned.
- 29th Legislature--Lawmakers went beyond the 90-day statutory limit for regular sessions, extending to the 98th day, relying on the constitutional limit of 121 days. The Legislature then adjourned and held technical session during budget standoff in the first special session. Despite the governor's call for the session to be held in Juneau, the special session was reconvened in Anchorage on 5/21/15, at which time both bodies adjourned the first special session sine die and immediately called themselves into the second special session, in Anchorage.
